Background Story

Thomdrick Holecarver is a rough and rugged deep dwarf. He is not the smartest tool in the shed, but he has learned well from his mentor Silas Urthodon. He has trained with Silas for aboutr 75 years, and while his mental accumen hasn't allowed him to master the medical side of the profession, he is a good hand at the more physical aspects of the job. The man can dig a grave in about half the time it takes a regular person. Though traditionally, like most Duergar, a follower of Asmodeus, Thomdrick has also signed up to work for the patron devil of the Dumas Family. He has also learned a lot of the more duplicitous skills that his mentor has been willing to teach him. He has spent time cultivating his mentor's contacts in the funeral industry, as well as within The Watch/City Guard and the city's underworld. He's an old fashioned pessimist of a Duerger and as such has a very contentious relationship with jovial head of the Dumas Family, Nicodeamus. Though he will do as he's told, he will do so with a grimace and could possibly be persuaded to turn on Nicodeamus as long as it was in secret it didn't effect his standing in the rest of his life.
