BACKGROUND STORY

The Dwarven village of Harmuth is located in a large isolated hilly region on the island of Er Kaal, known for its violent weather, broad chasms, and random volcanic activity. Er Kaal is also known for its wandering arcanists of multiple races, magicians who enjoy toying with the fabric of reality and the genetic heritage of various populations. Although having a residing town council, Harmuth is under the control of the neighboring Dwarven Kingdom of Ephronia, a city renowned for its rich legacy of heroicism, regality, craftsmanship, and innovation. Fatoumata's family were Harmuth's resident diplomats placed there to keep watch over the town and help govern its people. As such, she was raised in an environment rich with politeness, banter, charity, arts, and intellectual aspiration. This formed young Fatoumata's personality and her pursuit of that which is good and excellent. Harmuth and other nearby villages were often the target of wandering arcanists looking to experiment with their magick. One fateful morning while you Fatoumata wandered out to the mills to revel in their comradery and craftsmanship, a hole tore open in the ground before her, and she began spouting viscous black liquid like an overflowing bottle of carbonated tar. The tar gathered into a face, a gnarled old dwarf with an impossibly ugly visage. It spoke to her. "You. You are my daughter." A growling and scraping voice boomed, "and you are the opposable one. The one that will gain the leverage" people as such, she was raised in an environment rich with politeness, banter, charity, arts, and intellectual aspiration. This formed young Fatoumata's personality and her pursuit of that is good and excellent.

Harmuth and other nearby villages were often the target of wandering arcanists looking to experiment with their magick. One fateful morning while young Fatoumata wandered out to the mills to revel in their comradery and craftsmanship, a hole tore open in the ground before her and began spouting viscous black liquid like an overflowing bottle of carbonated tar. The tar gathered into a face, a gnarled old dwarf with an impossibly ugly visage. It spoke to her.

"You. You are the opposable one. The one that will gain the leverage you need!"

At which point the grotesque face of tar proceeded to spout the vile bilious black liquid towards her. Both hands were doused in the black goo and she put them up to guard her face, closing her eyes tight out of instinct.

When Fatoumata opened her eyes, the fountain of black goo was gone. But the hole remained. She looked around quickly to see if anyone responsible for this encounter and she saw nothing but the plains between her village and the lumber mills.

"Look at your hands, my child. My daughter," a voice rang in her head.

She looked down at her hands. Black goo was covering both but quickly evaporated once her gaze found its target. She was left with an incredible sight. A second opposable thumb on each hand.

Wondering if she'd imagined the event, she wandered back to the village to show her family. Suspiciously, her father would dodge any question about the events and her mother would quiet her. Upon doing her own limited research, she discovered that her family had indeed had encounters with various powerful entities in the past and now wonders if one of these entities are responsible for her 'difference'.

As the years passed, Fatoumata became something of both a celebrity and a pariah. People of her town and the surrounding Dwarven empire were both fascinated and terrified of her 'difference'. She has learned to adapt to this through disguise; carrying party masks with her and wearing beautiful gloves that distract from the 'difference' and draw people's attention to their ornate appearance instead.
