Introduction

Mamoon will be found near graveyards and crypts preparing to infiltrate them to sacrifice the bodies to her God(dess);

Appearance

Deep, sunken silver eyes. Closely cropped white hair beneath a silver circlet. Lithe for a Duergar and almost sexy, if it weren't for her nearly demonic presence. Wears a necklace of petrified elf fingers.

Expressions

"The forgotten Ones will rise again, by my hand"; "Shall I look into the abyss of the mouth of the Forgotten?"

Mannerisms

Rubs the tips of her fingers together, almost as though preparing magic. Relatively inactive gesticulation explodes into wild swinging of arms and broad facial expressions, almost as though bi-polar or partly possessed.

Motivations

To bring the pantheon of old Gods back to power. She sends bodies of the dead to sacrifice to her pantheon.

Passions

Necromantic magicks. Any insect that tunnels. Tunneling. Spelunking.

PERSONALITY

Aspiring to be the Fountainhead of Clax, the High Duergar God of Pestilence and Destruction, Mammoon will stop at nothing to incarnate herself as the ultimate High Priestess; clad in the bones of a thousand dead, each bone tied to the next with the flesh of a thousand more.

Mammoon's aspirations come from her abuse at the hands of her former spouse. Married young and corralled into the traditional power positions of a Duergar village, Mammoon sought power over everything else and would be ruthless in this pursuit. She sought the faith of her village, surrounding region, and eventually the Underdark. Vying for a position as Loxxed Priestess comparable to a magistrate, Mammoon watched as her competitor gained greater and greater favor. This favor grew until her competitor finally had a child. This Duergard tribe had a particularly hard time reproducing, and this was a sign from their God. Not only did she face ongoing abuse from her husband, but about her barren womb, Mammoon now faced imminent defeat in her pursuit of power.
