| Introduction   |
|--|
| The short, fat man behind the caged in counter at the local pawn shop greets you with a curt "Whatdyawant?"        |
| Appearance   |
| He's mostly bald with a thick unkempt mustache and a five o'clock shadow, sloppily dressed and bags under his eyes |
| Expressions  |
| "5 copper, best I can do", "This is a very fine specimen, just came in yesterday. It'll cost though"               |
| Mannerisms   |
| Talks with his hands, slightly wheezy, occasional eye twi  |
| Motivations  |
| Money, more money and a disdain for people in general  |
| Passions   |
| He likes gold... a lot   |
| Secrets  |
| He's a fence for the local thief's guild and at least half of his inventory is stolen goods                        |

| BACKGROUND STORY  |
|---|
| Tony is the stereotypical pawn shop owner. He's sleazy, greedy and ill-tempered. But if you're looking for stolen goods or to sell something in a pinch, Tony's your go to guy. You're never going to get a lot for what you're selling and you're going to pay way too much for anything you're buying but he'll definitely get you what you need, no questions asked. Tony is well known in the underworld and a card carrying member of the local thieves' guild. He's a pretty big fish, but he's definitely a bottom feeder |
