Ook is a mischievous, unimpressed, and condescendingly muttering monkey. He is the keeper of the infinite library between worlds. He loves bananas and the Dewey Decimal System. He is a skilled researcher and historian, with a deep knowledge of nature and the universe. He is also a master of monkey movement, able to swing through the jungle and图书馆 between worlds. He is a member of the Sylvan Elven Druids, who inhabit the surrounding jungles. Eventually found by the kind souls of Emnus, he was able to communicate and point to himself, shouting 'Ook!'. When the Druids found him reading through their tomes during his recovery, they recognized that he was beyond ordinary. They chose to transport him to the High Elven City of Emnus [A Major Elven City] to study. The Elves of Emnus were able to determine that he was a victim of magic, but the polymorph spell was of unknown origin to them and they weren't able to trace the magic or uncover his original form. They quickly came to see Ook's ability to categorize and organize tons of knowledge and appointed him as assistant to their keeper of archives and knowledge. Ook has since become renowned throughout the surrounding regions.

PERSONALITY

The jungle trading port of Ambor Maala [Any Mixed Race Trading port in a jungle environment] was host to most of the races of the realms and, alongside this, most of the arc magicks and knowledges one would expect from a diverse population. This vibrant locale held within its confines a collection of written lore that is well known even beyond the region. Keepers of this knowledge are revered. A modest and composed Firbolg named Wesley Palaxian had gained esteem as head keeper of these lore and large volume of tomes within which the knowledges were held.One fateful afternoon, the library of Ambor Maala was invaded by a small group of elven Drow Soldiers and their commander, a powerful evocation/transmutation mage from the Underdark seeking greater knowledges of the arcane that were contained within the library. Wesley was far from a warrior and knew that in the wrong hands these knowledge would prove destructive for his home town and beyond. Valian defending the library, Wesley mortally wounded. During what he believed were his final breaths he confidently cursed the Drow and their leader.

 "Foolish furbag," the Drudge condescendingly mutters unimpressed. "There is clearly nothing you can do to stop us. Might as well be a monkey following the filthy jungle people you hold so dear." The mage uttered some mystical incantations in Drow and traced sigils in the air, transforming Wesley into an Orangutan. The invaders then proceeded to ignite the shelves books in the library before fleeing through a teleportation portal.

 The local guard attended the blaze and brought it under control but Wesley had already pulled himself from the blaze. Ashamed to ever show himself anyone in his home town, he slowly retreated into the jungle. For days, Wesley sought out the Sylvan Elven Druids he knew inhabited the surrounding jungles. Eventually found by these kind souls, Wesley was no longer able to communicate besides pointing to himself and shouting 'Ook!'. When the Druids found him reading through their tomes during his recovery, they recognized that this 'monkey' was beyond ordinary. They chose to transport him to the High Elven City of Emnus [A Major Elven City] to study.
